HOW TO PREPARE GERMAN SAUSAGES

by Klaus Mann and Achim Reske

CONTENT:

This new handbook is based on the German standard reference work for professionals on the traditional production of meat products. The recipes, which were previously only aimed at the specialised public, are now rewritten for the amateur sausage maker, clearly explained and illustrated in detail with step-by-step instructions. This means that even beginners with no previous knowledge (but of course advanced cooks as well) will be able to prepare the professional recipes on their own. In addition to the list of ingredients, quantities in standard household sizes and the handling of the required equipment are included, as well as information on the waiting and storage time for each type of sausage.

The authors: Klaus Mann is a veterinary surgeon and passionate hunter. As an ambitious and experienced hobby sausage maker, he knows the really important tricks for beginners and advanced self-sausage makers. Achim Reske is a trained master butcher and specialized in sausages made of game. His expertise is also based on his many years of experience as the owner of the regionally leading game butcher's shop.
